We never weary talking about our drivers. On their skill, integrity and faithfulness depends the success of our business and we appreciate it.

No cab company in this country, ever achieved enduring prosperity until the "human equation," as represented by the men at the wheel, had been solved. The answer was not found in rules and regulations, but in "a square deal for

The public is entitled to many things from the right kind of cab system. It is personal service of the most exacting nature and the XELLOW CAB driver is our most important and only contact with the cab pairon.

The men who pioneered the way into the modern cab business were sympathetic and broad-minded. Rules were abolished in favor of "intelligent co-operation," "Musts" and "Don'ts" went down before a sincere desire by every, employee to serve.

We have frankly copied those pioneers. We have profited by their experience-now the basis of every modern YELLOW CAB system in the United States. We would rather imifate well than originate poorly.

And so we like to tell you about our drivers, for we are honestly proud of them. We have spent time and money in gathering together a group of high class men whose happiness and prosperity is as much our concern as the success of this business.

WHAT IS VII

An unclassified reptile was plowed from the ground, muck land, in Clearwater, Florida. No one even ventures a guess as to its classification.

The "thing" reaembles an cel in general contour. It is about it inches long and as large in circumference as a medium-sized banana. Rather stubby. It has a fin along its back like an eel, also a tail of that class. It has a smooth back of green-black, running to a dirty yellow on the belly, where it has scales like a snake, which enables it to crawl. It appears at home in the water, yet its native place appeared to be the earth, as it was plowed up in dry muck land. The head is the same size as the body, tapering to a point like an eel, while the month is big and wide.

The queerost part of the "critter," however, is that just back of the gills there are two small feet, with claws, very similar to those of an alligator.

The reptile, for it must surely belong to that family, is quick in motion and resents being poked with a stick, striking like a snake to show its anger.—E. E. Preston, in Adven-

Bread and the Children's Welfare

IT may never have occurred to you that good bread, such as HOLSUM bread, contains every element needed for the proper diet of children. Yet, this most economical food is often considered lightly and is seldom eaten often enough.

It contains carbohydrates, protein, iron, mineral salts and the vitamins found in milk. Medical authorities say that a deficiency of these elements is the cause of the malnutrition among school children-a condition affecting one child out of every three.

Malnutrition is easily overcome by proper feeding. Give your children more HOLSUM bread. Serve it to them in various ways, as toast for breakfast, milk toast, with milk or in puddings. Write for our recipe book giving forty new ways for serving HOLSUM. When ordering get HOLSUM—always—for "there's a difference in bread".

"Much good can be accomplished by the work of looking after the welfare of children of pre-school age," declared Dr. Welch. "But the success of the movement depends entirely upon the public.

"The personal factor is the great objective, for without a responsive attitude by the public little can be accomplished. We should all get together and help the work along everyone lending a helping hand.

Starvation and Dissipation.

The author of the Voice of the People in the Saturday and Sunday Gazette, perhaps failed to see more than the immediate responsibility of the rich and extravagant who spent the haif million dollars or more in riotous revels in Berlin, New Year's eve, while starvation stalked in thousands of homes. The German situation is nothing new. While we were digging up the dollars here in the United States for the starving people in Russia, the soviet government was looting churches of millions upon millions of dollars' worth of jewels and instead of taking the money and giving to the poer, were providing for an army of a million men and, as Emma Goldman says in her book, the leaders were living in luxury, That is the inevitable in life. It is always so. It probably always will be so. We have no immediate responsibility for the German starving. We have no immediate responsibility for the Greek and Armenian orphans and refugees. We had no responsibility for the Russian starving. It depends upon how we look at these things. There are starving children in Germany. Before the Head of the Universe they call more loudly to us than to riotous, wine drinking, gay spenders of Berlin. The only difference is that our cars in America are attuned to the cry of little children in suffering; the cars of the drinking mob of rich in Berlin were not. We, in America, can hear the wall of the starving above the shouts of the drunken and the gourmandizers. Let Maximilian Harding, the great Gprman publicist speak. He says in his Sunday letter to American newspapers:

How much money this night might have realized for the poor, had they been given all that was poured out for amusement, gourmandizing, and dissipations! Must not a sense of decency have demanded that a nation which is compelled to beg at strangers' doors renounce these things? Charity begins at home, even when, as now in Germany, foreign help is indispensable.

But such thoughts disturb neither those who. In evening dress, drink champagne, nor the crowds on the streets.

The peal of the New Year's chimes is drowned by the singing, shouting masses. But in the back-ground lean figures of wretchedness collect confetti, paper snakes, and other rubbish in dirty bags to resell them for the price of a plate of

In making up the winter menu congressmen seem to be divided over their liking for Mellon.

A Peace Plan Comes from the Morgue The peace plan has come forth. The name of the author, who will eventually be paid $100,000 for it, is withheld, but the "best practicable plan by which the United States may cooperate with other nations, looking toward the prevention of war," is before us. There is not a new suggestion in it. It is the league of nations as now operated dressed in new clothes, or the old clothes patched with the reservations which were supported by the United States senate and vetoed by President plan, "By sheer force of social international gravitation such cooperation (with the league) becomes inevitable." reads the pian.

How we are going to make the nations now in the teague accent all these proposed changes, is not indicated. There seems to be an implied promise and faith that once in the league "all these other things shall be added unto you." The paramount thing the author impresses upon us. however, is to get into the lengue, which is to be the salvation of humanity. It all sounds as though written by an original leagueophobian who has seen the trend of public opinion and sensed the reactions of the people to the full. We have already refused to blanket ourselves with a league connection. There never has been a time when there was a possibility of our getting into the league since the veto of the president was not overridden. The impotency of the frague to settle the genuine great questions which have involved the peace of the nations, has impressed the people of the United States that it is not for us and never can be. The league has sion in Europe and stir a spirit among the racediscussed unimportant things and accomplished a hating, jealous, greedy, pogrom-making, powerfew more which have only collateral relationships seeking, debt-dodging, malicious and intriguing to the real causes of five years of European disturbances.

The author of the plan was wise to climinate the Versailles treaty and to disayow any counection with it. The league, however, is the child of that vicious instrument. The treaty was formulated in greed, in an atmosphere recking with loot, and it was a hypocritical thing to create a league for peace from the spawn of war which was the very protoplasm of the Versailles treaty. The United States will never join a league which comes from such an evil parent born in hysteria and malice.

The United States has already indicated how we might join a permanent court of international justice and still pursue our own way and seek ion the barometer of financial progress is how

HIRED ESCORTS

Washington.-The new feminine practice of hiring men escorts promises to become a recogsocial custom now that various colleges have given it their sanction. A recent report from hat prgressive town, Emporia, Kan;, tells of a collegiate bureau, where student escorts may be obtained for 25 cents. And from Los Angeles comes the news that students of the University of California are selling their services as squires to Open my pages and run them o'er unattended dames, to defray college expenses.

This innovation is viewed as a great triumph by those who rejoice in women's economic independence and the complete equality of the sexes. Men, they complain, have always been thie to buy feminine companionship with money, but heretofore this privilege has been denied to

In a few years, we may expect to find the girls dering escorts as nonchalantly as they now order taxicabs. When a damsel is suddenly seized with the desire to attend a cabaret or hotel dinner dance all she will have to do is call the nearest escort agency and place an order which probably will be something like this: "Send me over a man who can dance this evening, preferably one who is tall and dark and not too duli. No, not the one you sent last time. I have heard all his favorite stories before, and dislike that oriental perfume he uses. If you make this a good order I will raise the fee from $10 to $15 and phy all transportation expenses. Have him here by 8:30 sure. Goo'bye." Since the war, professional escorts have been available in all of the great tourist centers like Paris, London, and New York. Socially adopt and vouched for by reliable agencies, these men are a great boon to many lone women, young and middle-aged, who come to these cities from all parts of the world, lured by the widely-heralded attractions of metropolitan life. Some of these women, especially those who are there only for brief period, stop at the best hotels, are liberally supplied with pocket money and have a secure social position at home. During the first week or two, they are content to shop and attend the movies and a few matinees, but after that they begin to feel lonely. They realize that, without friends—particularly masculine friends—they are missing the most interesting features of the

In New York city the professional escort usually has his headquarters at one of the big publie dance halls, where he acts as dancing instructor. The woman who goes to one of these halls and takes a dancing lesson or two is informed of the escort service. She is privileged, she is told, to employ one of these instructors at any time during the afternoon or night to squire her anywhere she wants to go. Each is of good personal appearance; his dress is all that may be required, and his manner and deportment impeccable. He is the sort of man who would make a good impression if the woman were suddenly confronted by one of her home-town friends or relatives.

The entire arrangement, in fact, is said to be excellent from the woman's point of view. It is on a strictly business basis, and she is under no obligations. She pays for what she gets—an escort-and having paid, she does not have to be at all entertaining unless she wants to. go to a hotel dinner dance. She pays for the dinner. Later, they go to one of the theater roofs, where there is dancing and food. She pays.

As a means of earning a fairly easy living, the arrangement is also highly satisfactory to the brilliant or ambitious fellow. Before the dance craze which swept the world in 1913, he was probably a clerk, but since the entrance of the fox-trot he has applied himself with painstaking diligence to being a courtier. He is not cultured, but he knows the city and its ways, particularly in dancing and theatrical circles, and can de-scribe them entertainingly. He reads a news-paper thoroughly every morning, to keep up with topics of the day. In short, he has perfected the art of being an agreeable companion.

In London, the escort business is handled on a large and elaborate scale by well-known London caterers. Through these agencies every kind of social asset may be hired—from single escorts. with faultiess English clothes and accents, to whole mobs of admirers who are employed to greet the new arrival or speed the parting guest. When the daughter of a wealthy American sails from Southampton or Liverpool for home a whole regiment of handsome British cavaliers, in impressive attire and laden with gifts of candy and flowers, is often on hand to see her off. It is a farewell ceremony worthy of a princess and its description always creates a stirring effect in the lady's home town, which does not know how much it cost.

Peace does not come from a set of rules printed in an international primer. It does not come and be permanent by solemn covenant. There have been thousands of such covenants in Europe in the past centuries, later scrapped, torn to shreds and covered with deluges of blood in war. Peace comes from a sincere desire for peace. That is what we have in America. To that end we have been willing to go far; to sacrifice much. Performance is better than promise. "Long is the way through precept, brief and efficacious through example," is still a sound maxim. Let the whole world profit by our example. That is the peace plan that will win the capital prize from America regardless of the jury of awards which Mr. Bok selected.

As an academic document the prize winning plan may be interesting, just as is an essay from a high school child. It may start some discusgovernments, to a new viewpoint and a new spirit of peace. However, that is much to hope. Still, after one reads the document, there is a feeling of deep regret that the author went to the morgue for his inspiration for the Bok prize peace plan.

The marshal profered the makings. "Have a smoke," he urged.

But the boy would not, shaking a decided head. Another oddity, thought Derr. The boy put up a hand to the side of his head, drow the hand back as if shot and glaneed sharply at the marshal's wife, who happened to be looking out of the window. A look of relief vied with the sorrow in the blue eyes. The eyes slid around to Derr and caught him staring. Instantly the relief was displaced by fear, rampant fear. Another point of interest, Deer sat back in his chair and inspected, for a space, the ceiling. When he dropped his eyes the prisoner was still watching him furtively, occrtainly there was something familiar about the grimy features of the hoy even as there was about his voice.

Deer purposely began to stare. The red hair too was familiar. But not the haircut. It was a wrotched hair ent, Apparently the barber had employed sheep shears. The eyebrows, perfect crescents, were dark, almost black. Odd combination, red hair and dark eyebrows. Where was it that he had seen such a combination? It was recently, he was positive. And as Deer spurred his memory the answer to the puzzle began to shape itself in the back of his ment, cheerup, entered the memory the answer to the puzzle began to shape itself in the back of his mind.

he ran behind the back of the marshul's coreal.

"You little fooi!" Derr whispered, panting, holding the other's wrists.

"You keep quiet and I'll get you out of this somehow. Show it! Do you want 'em to find out?"

The prisoner desisted from the vain struggle. "I—I think Shale knows."

"Shut up!" Thus Derr, the two others coming up at this juncture.

The marshal reached for the prisoner. Derr, as though by accident, swung in front of the prisoner. The to shape itself in the back of his mind.

"Cheerup, cheerup," entreated the marshal, whose full stomach made him feel at peace' with the world. "I don't believe the judge will give you more'n thirty days."

"Then you'll get that jail door fixed prompt and soon," snapped the marshal's wife. "It you think I'm gonna cook three meals a day for thirty days, ninety meals, for any criminal, you got another guess. Go get that door fixed by to-morrow noon, or I'll lean a frying pan against your car. You hear me whistling?"

"No call to get het, 'Liza," soothed the marshal. "We've got to do the best we can, that's all, and—""
"You said tomorrow noon."
"You said tomorrow noon."

"You get that door fixed tonight!"

"You said tomorrow noon."

"It is to make the change my mind again, I'll change your features at the same time!"

"Let's go," said the marshal, plucking the prisoner by the sieeve.

They went, but not in any sense as the marshal intended.

The prisoner said lithely to his feet.

They were, but not in any sense as the marshal intended.

The prisoner sild littlely to his feet and struck the marshal under the chin with the heet of his hand. The marshal, half in and half out of his chair, was caught off balance and went over with 2 crash. Before the marshal hit the floor the prisoner was jacknifing over the window sill. The marshal's wife, sufficiently annoyed as she was with her husband, was not one to stand by quietly while he was mishandled. She flung the frying pan. It was good line, but over. The frying pan smashed through both the upper and lower suches, showered the shoulders of the fleeing prisoner with broken glass and cannot to rest in the dust of the street.

glass and came to rest in the dust of the street.

Derr, who had sprung to his test, hurled himself through the window a short length behind the pribaner. He was in good time to see the prizoner dash plump into the arms of the Indian agent, Charlie Shale. Which tall and yellow-faced citizen uttered a whoop of surprise and threw both arms around the prisoner. This was purse instinct and done sole by to save himself from falling.

"forme go!" cried the prisoner.

"Why-uh-how!" stuttered Shale.

By EDNA KENT FORBES THE HOUSEWORKER'S HANDS

The housewife should take to heart that good old saying about the value of an ounce of prevention and a pound of cure. It will take her an hour to or cire. It will take her an hour to undo the damage done by a day of housework. It will take her no time at all to pull on gloves before setting to work. At first they make her feel awkward and unable to work with her usual speed, but once she is used to them they will not impede her at all.

CHOICE OF THREE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been invited to a party and told to bring a boy. I am only 16 years old and have never been allowed to go with a boy. My mother says that I can go to this party because it is a birthday party for my best-gir friend and begins at 5 and ends at 9 o'clock. I don't know what boy to take. I have a cousin who is a few weeks older than I am and a brother who is two years and a brother who is two years.

These answering must bring or mall their answers to this office, addressed with the 347 or whatever it may be. He in turn, will then, if he desires, telephone or write to the person who is seeking the position.

It must also be borne in mind that the Gazette can not reveal the identity of the advertiser, who of course, would not have advertised as he did if he wished the applicants to call on him in person. HOW TO ANSWER CLASSIFIED ADS.

Fifth Time in Asking 1924 Session.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] tained is used for the democratic national convention to be held this summer. New York, Chicago and several other cities will also be applicants for the convention when the national committee meets here this month to make the final decision, While the republicans have conwer, Jan month to make the final decision, While the republicans have confined their conventions almost entirely to the middle west, the democrats have done considerable wandering in the past. In comparatively recent years they have been as far south as Baitlmore and as far west as San Francisco. Should St. Louis is named as the convention city this year, abundant precedent may be found for the choice. Since 1876 St. Louis has had the honor of entertaining more democratic national conventions than any other city. Four times within that period have the presidential tickets of the party been named in the Mound City. Chicago, with three of the democratic national conventions to city. Chicago, with three of the democratic national conventions to its credit, is next in the list. In the early years Baitimore was the favorite convention city of the democrats. Going back more than 75 years, the meeting places of the democrate were as follows, with their presidential nominee:

1844—Baitimore; Polk nominated on ninth ballot.

London—Titlan's painting "Venus and Adonis," in the national gallery here, has been considered to be only a studio repetition of one at Madrid, but in the course of renovating operations the discovery has been made that the painting is a first experimental version of the subject by the master himself. It exhibits Titlan's style in the transition period between the "Bacchus and Ariadne" and the famous "Mother and Child." During the last few days I had a letter from one of the German men who worked with us in Saxony. In fact he has been in charge of the feeding work in Saxony ever since I left. When the Quakers turned this work over to the Germans as they did in 1922, he became an employe of the German government. In his work he has had a good opportunity to know the conditions. His letter was in response to one of mine asking several direct questions about the present situation. Hence the reason for going into it all so fully. I have made a translation of the most of the letter, thinking that you might care to use parts of it to might care to use parts of it to arouse some more interest in the campaign for funds. The clippings which he refers to only confirm what ho has written but do not add much Trusting that you may be able to use some of this, I am,

Dresden, Dec. 9, 1922.

In the first place, I wish to beer your pardon for not having written sooner. I think that, in truth, I did not know what to write you. If one writes only about the need and the suffering, it is too much for one time. The need is there and one must be thankful that, things go as well as they do. I do not want to exaggerate the facts and therefore enclose clippings from the newspapers. With the reading of these you will be able to form a pleture of how things are here at present.

This week, Mr. Francis Kane, formerly attorney in Philadelphia, was here. For six months he worked with the Qualers in Vienna and has travelled in Poland, Russia and Germany. I accompanied him when he called on the present Saxon Minister and atso in his visit to his predecessor. The condition of the children in one of the suburbs of Dresden made a very deep impression upon him.

Russia Can Feed Self.

Of course, one can not compare Germany with Russia, since Germany with Russia, since Germany had advanced much further before the war, both conomically and culturally, than Russia. As far as food is concerned, we will soon arrive at the point where Russia was in 1921 and 122. The difference, however, is that Russia can feed itself, providing there is no fallure of crops, while Germany even with the best of harvests is not in a position to feed its people for a whole year. In Germany there are too many people can only be fed provided that the German industry exports goods and in return imports raw materials and then with what it carns is able to buy food. But what is to be done when the industry has been at a standstill as it has been since a year ago?

I lease do not think that I myself come to their home each day and cat dinner with them.

The government and also the population do everything in their power to decrease the need.

Outside Aid Needed.

I am convinced that alone we are too weak to conquer the need. Private benevolence of foreigners will help us further. But if we are to procure the needed food for the German people, it will be necessary for the foreign financial interests to grant us credit.

for the foreign financial interests to grant us credit.

As you have read, we have had now for four weeks new money, the Rentenmark. It is not backed by a gold reserve but the German land is security for it. It lims, however, no value in international trade, but only for trade, within Germany. In a value in international trade, but only for trade within Germany. In a short time it is expected that the Reichsbank will again print gold notes, that is; notes backed by gold or foreign money (deliars, English pounds, Dutch gulden, or Swiss franks.) At present the worth of the Renteumark is fixed at that of the Renteumark is fixed at that of the gold mark, that is; for a deliar one receives 4.20 Renteumarks, exactly as in peace times. Whether the Renteumark will remain stable depends upon whether the government succeeds in balancing its budget; that is, upon whether they can make their receipts cover their expenditures. This is more difficult because our most important industrial territory, the Ruhr district, is lost to us.

Hack to Gold Mark
The phantastic numbers, trillions and billions, have vanished now and and billions, have vanished now and we have come back to the single mark and pfennig. In November my salary was 120,000,000,000,000 paperements. That sounds like a let but it is not much. Now the salaries are fixed in gold marks. My December salary will be 116 gold or tentenactics. That is about 27 or 28 dollars. In reality it is only about 19 because al! the prices are higher than in peace times, for example: sugar, 60 pfennigs (in peace times 24:) streetcar fare, 20 pfennigs (in peace times 10;) a pair of shoes 28 mrks (in peace times 13;) and so forth. I have told you what my salary was in order that you might see how poor the German people are. And yet in comparison with others I am very well paid and I have no I am very well paid and I have no wife or children to care for. In truth it means the strictest economy on al

Now we are approaching the Christmas festival. For the great mass of the people it will be the sad-dest since the end of the war. Aldest since the end of the war.
